Stephanie Nixon completed her undergraduate degree in Language Arts and Secondary Education from Hanover College, received her Master's degree in Education with a focus in Curriculum Design from Indiana Wesleyan University, and continued her post-graduate work earning her Administrative Licensure and Superintendent Licensure from Indiana Wesleyan University.

Stephanie served as a Vice Principal of Thomas Carr Howe Academy and in a few short years, she was named the Principal of Thomas Carr Howe Community High School. In her role as the Principal, she led a 7-12 comprehensive school that was the foundation of the Irvington community. Because of many accomplishments at Howe, Stephanie was given the opportunity to govern Crispus Attucks Medical Magnet High School, a historic educational institution with an emphasis on Health Occupations. Under her leadership, the school accomplished an "A" rating, and maintained 100% graduation rate and college acceptance rate. The school was nationally known through the U.S. News & World Report's as one of "America's Best High Schools in Indiana" under her tutelage.

She served on the Madam Walker Theatre Center's Board as Board President, and has served on the University of Indianapolis Community Advisory Board as way of giving back to the community that so richly gives to her students. Also, she has presented on The Healthy School Report Card at numerous Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development conferences, a direct initiative and collaboration from ASCD.

Most importantly, Stephanie is a proud mother of four: Isaiah, Ilexis, Israel, and Immori.
